ABOUT THE WINE

The character of Mendoza wines is forged in high altitude desert vineyards irrigated by mineral-rich snowmelt from glaciers and snowfields. High altitude means cool temperatures and clear air, and clear air means more sunlight for building flavor in the grapes, helping to make Mendoza the source of Argentina's well-earned reputation for top quality, unique wines.

WINEMAKING NOTES

The grapes were vineyard selected and hand-harvested prior to pressing. The juice was cold-settled and solids were removed before fermentation, which occurred in upright fermentors and barrels at 13° celsius (55°F). Approximately 65 percent of the wine underwent malolactic fermentation before it was aged on its lees for three to four months to impart a rich, toasty mouthfeel.
